GroupCalendar provides the possibility to display activities from multiple users, teams and resources. It supports several views with the option to define user-specific settings to meet individual requirements. Furthermore, the GroupCalendar enables users to easily reschedule activities via a drag&drop functionality.

Main features:

Grouping:

It is possible to show the activities from single users, multiple users, teams and resources. The add-on also provides the possibility to load the calendars of specific user-groups defined via an advanced find and hence offers a simultaneous view of activities from more than one user. This helps to avoid scheduling conflicts and to coordinate users more efficiently. Additionally, each user is able to define and save user groups or default users separately. Furthermore, the GroupCalendar displays working hours and time-off specified in CRM for users and resources. Users can also embed the GroupCalendar into a CRM entity.

Activity creation

It is possible to create activities directly out of the GroupCalendar. The add-on also provides a color coding functionality. Users therefore have the possibility to display activities in different colors dependent on determined field values. This is useful in several cases, for example if users want to display the different kinds of appointments in different colors. Additionally, activities can be displayed with multiple rows in order to get more information about an activity at a glance.

Printing

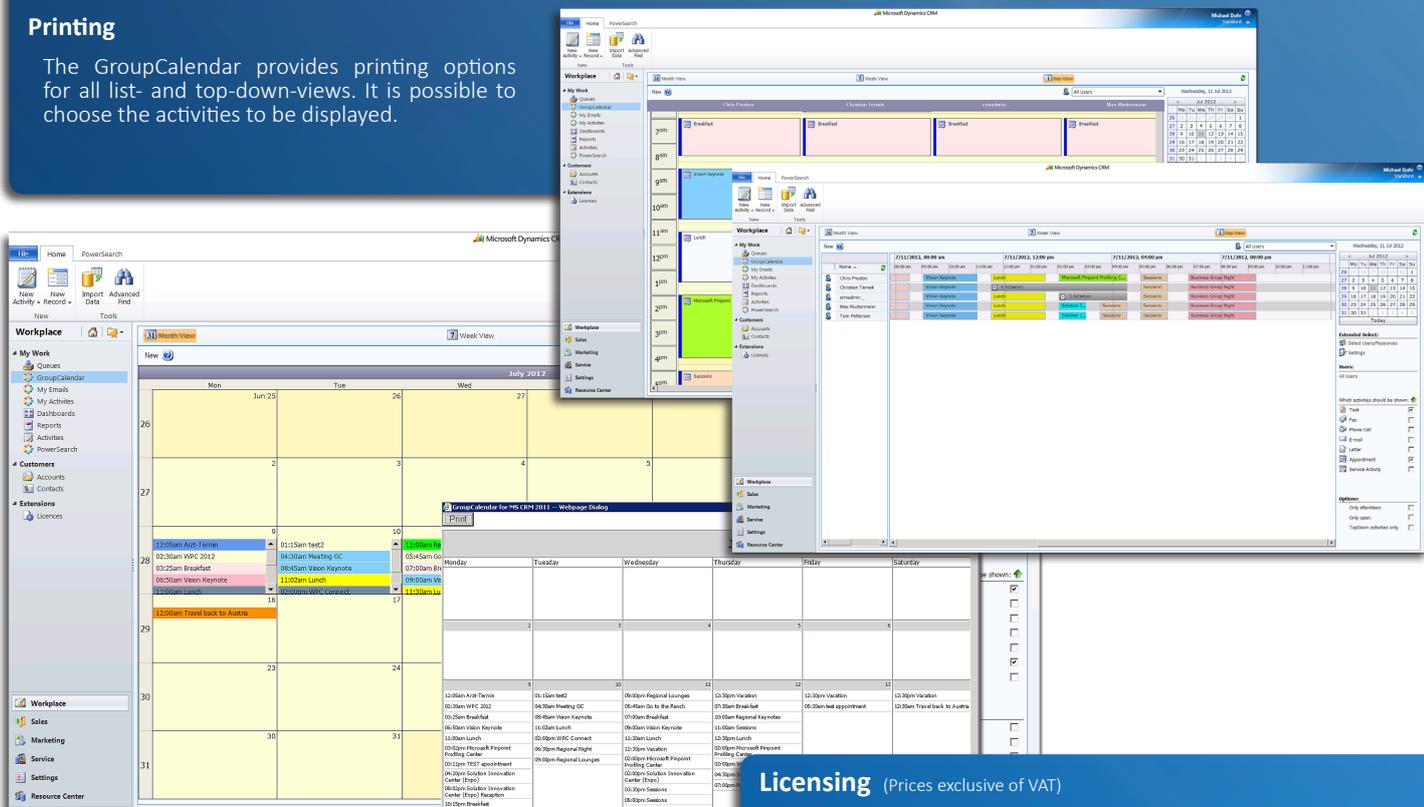

The GroupCalendar provides printing options for all list- and top-down-views. It is possible to choose the activities to be displayed.

Views

- Day-, week-, month-view: These views show all activities within the specified time. Activities can simply be opened with a double-click. In the month-view, activities lasting for several days are highlighted to keep a compact overview.
- Top-down view: In this view, activities are separated per user to get a plain view of the activities.
- GANTT-view: Every view can be either shown in the GANTT- or list-view. Next to offering a drag&drop-functionality in order to reschedule activities, even between different users, the GANTT-view is very helpful for showing activities of many users at once.
